“Leur Songe de la Paix,” music video by R. Lane Clark and Stephen Travis Pope released by HeavenEverywhere

Leur Songe de la Paix (Their Dream of Peace) -- DVD music video by R. Lane Clark (images) and Stephen Travis Pope (music) based on a text by Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. -- 13:00 minutes

Production by HeavenEverywhere, Santa Barbara -- 2002-05.

Distributed by the Gandhi & King Season for Nonviolence and the Association for Global New Thought.

Available through the King Center Bookstore, Atlanta.

The 13-minute music video “Leur Songe de la Paix (Their Dream of Peace)” combines R. Lane Clark's riveting abstract images with computer-processed voices and instruments by composer Stephen Travis Pope, and the voice of Martin Luther King, Jr. The motivation behind the piece is to provide the simplest possible setting for several excerpts from Dr. King's famous “A Time to Break the Silence” speech, delivered in New York exactly one year before his assassination. The images were painted directly on 35mm slides using a sgraffito-like technique to remove layers of the photo emulsion, and then scanned into a computer and composed into the video collage. The music is in three movements (fast/slow/fast) for voices, bells, analog synthesizer, orchestral samples, and Morse-code program.

Included on the DVD are materials for local organizers from the annual Gandhi & King Season for Nonviolence.

The DVD has been distributed by the Association for Global New Thought, an inter-faith coalition of 800 churches, and was widely played nation-wide at events related to the Martin Luther King day of commemoration in January, 2006.
